Late last night a tall, stalwart man, with a Western accent, entered Bellevue and asked for Misa Reed. When told she was in the hospital his face became radiant with desight.

"At last," he said, "I have found her!"

Then he eagerly asked if he could see her and was greatly disappointed when told it was too late for visitors.

"Well," he said, "Twe found her anyhow. Fve searched for her for two years.

"My name is Morris. Lucy and I grew up together in San Antonio. We were boy and girl sweathearts, and became engaged to be married. Our wedding day was set two years ago, when Lucy disappeared.

"Finally I found she had come to New York. To-morrow I shall see her and persuade her. if I can, to return home with me as soon as she is well."

Morris said he owned a valuable ranch near San Antonio and could give his bride a good home.
